There is now widespread recognition of the importance of gender strategies in promoting growth and development and in improving welfare systems. This is reflected both in the increasing importance of gender-specific programs aimed at strengthening women's participation in economic life, in politics and in institutions, and in the progress of theoretical analysis and indicators for monitoring and evaluating these programs.

The course will focus on the gender dimensions of the economy and their different impacts on society, with an interdisciplinary approach. Building on the reputation earned from the success of the past two editions, and thanks to a consolidated group of high level academics and experts, the school will provide an intensive, in-depth look at the linkages between gender, economics and social policies; participants will also have the opportunity to discuss their current research in an international environment.

Programme Information

Target: Master and PhD. Students in Economics, Sociology, Politics, Demography, Management, Engineering and related disciplines, from both European and non-European Countries. A limited number of places will be reserved to professionals wishing to upgrade their theoretical knowledge on gender and economics.

Maximum number of participants: 30.

Course duration: One week.

Course structure: The course will be organized in: morning lectures; afternoon sessions (devoted to group activities, case studies, best practices and experiences, students' presentations). Tutors will also be present throughout the course to support students. A more detailed program will be available by mid-June on the course website at: www.icilo.org/gender Fees: The full fee is Euro 1,600 covering course material, tutoring, lunches, coffee breaks and a social dinner and transfer to University residences. Accommodation can also be provided free-of-charge in University residences outside the ITCILO Campus, thanks to the in-kind support of the University and Polytechnic of Turin.

Thanks to the generous support of our sponsors partial fellowships are available. Therefore selected students will need to cover only a fee of Euro 400.

On-Campus accommodation at the ITCILO is also available upon request. Cost for half board and lodging on Campus during the whole course amounts to Euro 550.

Certificate of attendance: provided at the end of the course.

Applications: will open on April 18, 2016 and close on May 23, 2016.

The application form can be accessed on-line at:
http://intranetp.itcilo.org/STDRFFUND?coord_code=A909182&set_language=en

Accepted participants will be notified by June 3.

Abstract of Program

Lectures will cover a variety of topics – under the unifying frame of the life cycle perspective - such as: labour force participation; family planning; retirement decisions; savings and portfolio decisions; financial education and planning; financial communication and language; time-use; pay gap; glass ceiling; gender-responsive budgeting; equality and wellbeing indicators; diversity management; political participation; gender quotas; migration issues.

The course will include both academic sessions and case studies. Lecturers will have a wide experience in public administration (Ministries, European Commission, Bank of Italy) or in the private sector.

A 3-month internship/visiting period in the Fall 2016 at CeRP-Collegio Carlo Alberto or at the Department of Economics, University of Turin, sponsored by UniCredit & Universities Foundation, will be offered to two students. The selection will be based on CVs and research topics.
